

Executive Dashboard

4.2M

Total Rides

3.3M

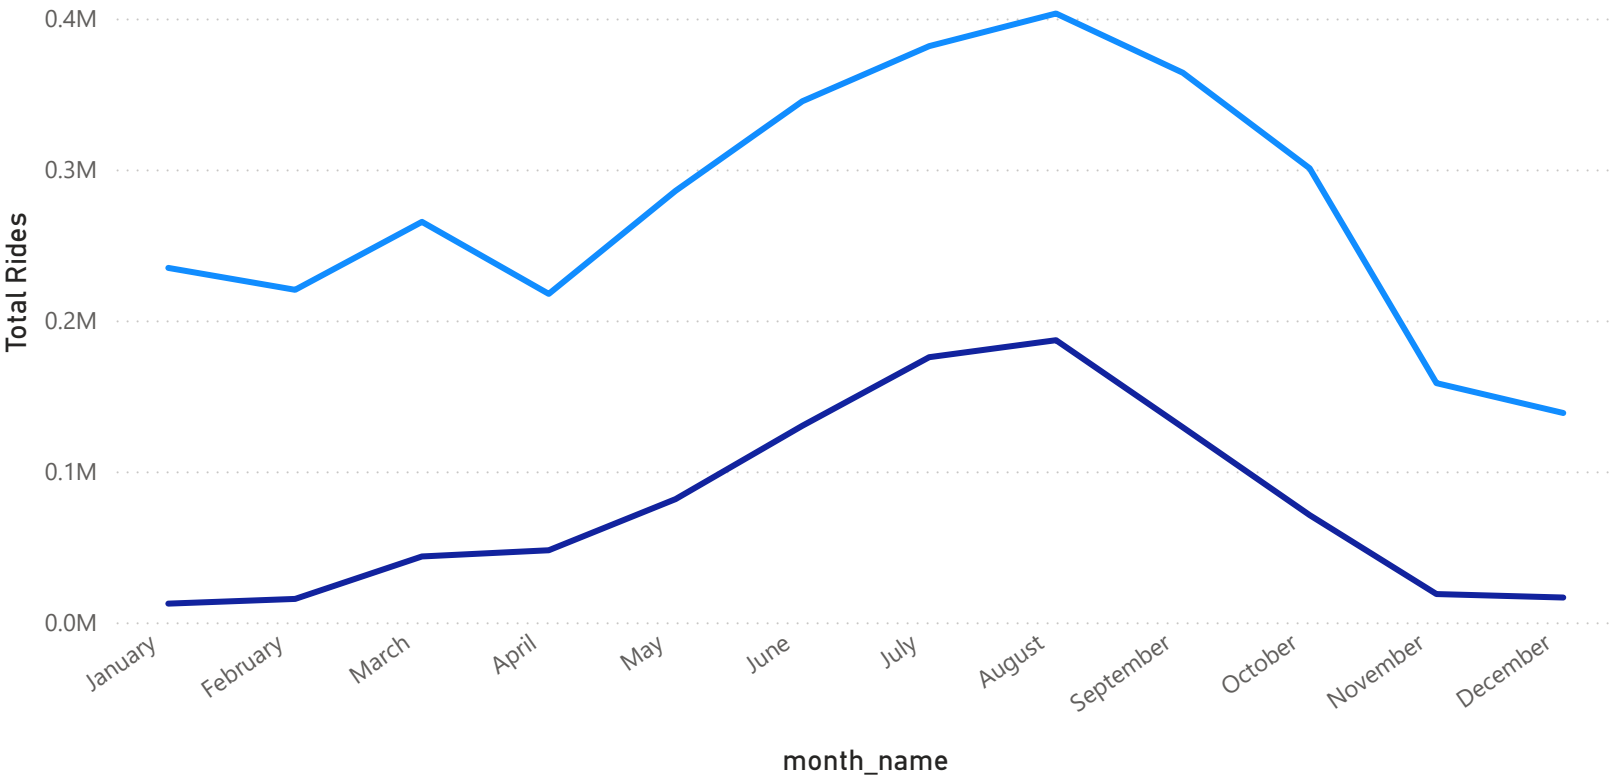

Member Rides

78.1%

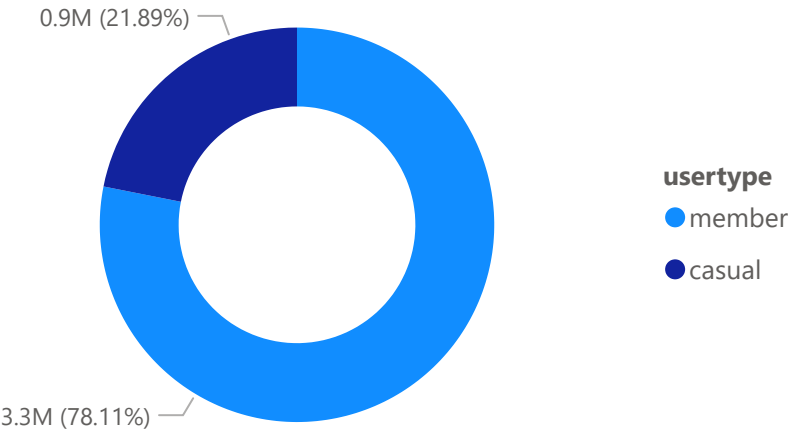

Member Share %

Monthly Ride Volume: Members vs Casual Riders

usertype ● casual ● member

Membership Distribution

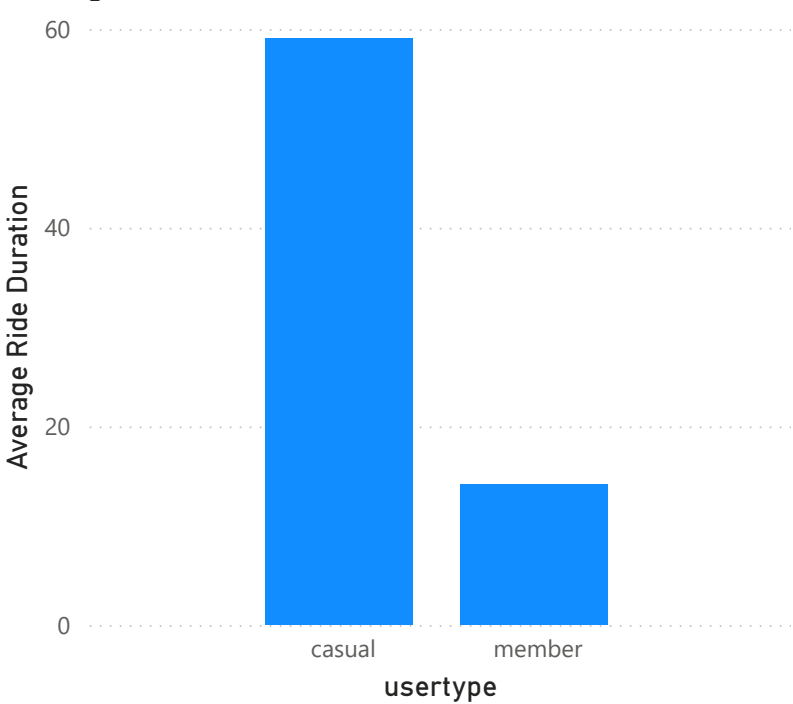

Key Insights

- Members generate 78% of total rides.
- Casual riders take fewer trips but ride significantly longer than members.
- Peak demand occurs during summer months.
- Member ridership remains stable year-round.

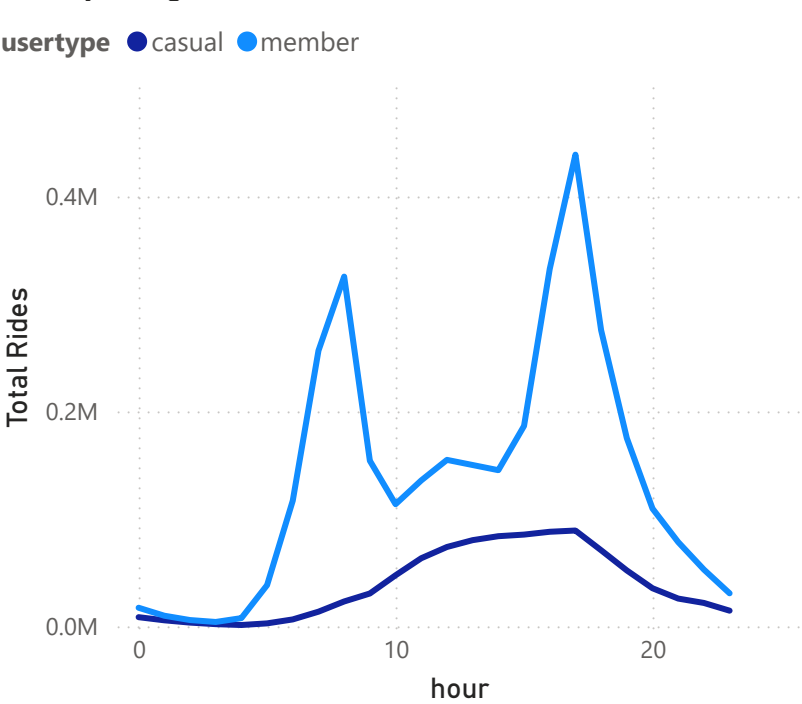

Marketing Insights

Understanding Behavioral Differences Between Members and Casual Riders

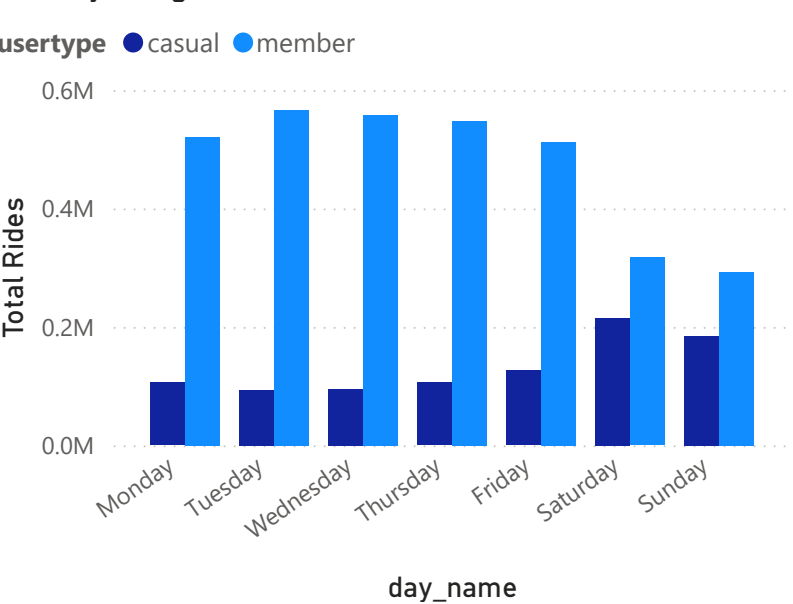

Average Ride Duration

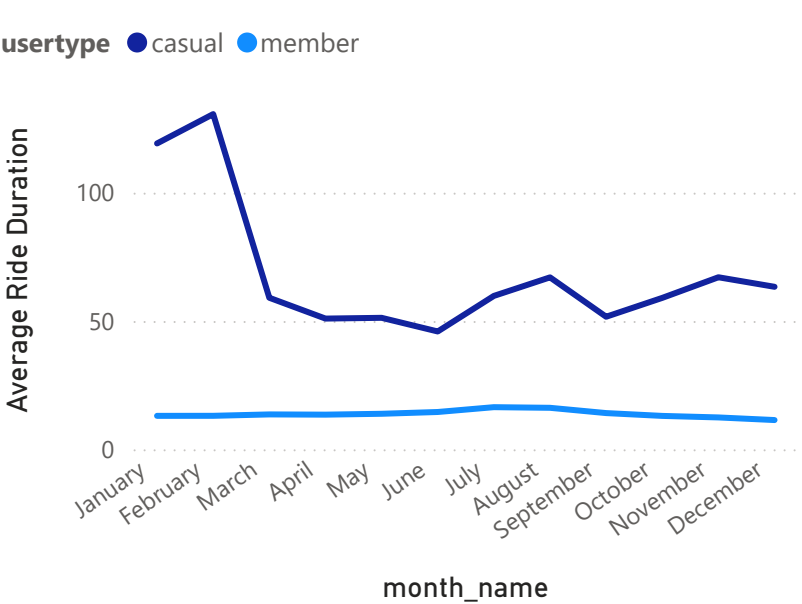

Hourly Usage Patterns

Weekly Usage Patterns

Seasonal Ride Duration Trends

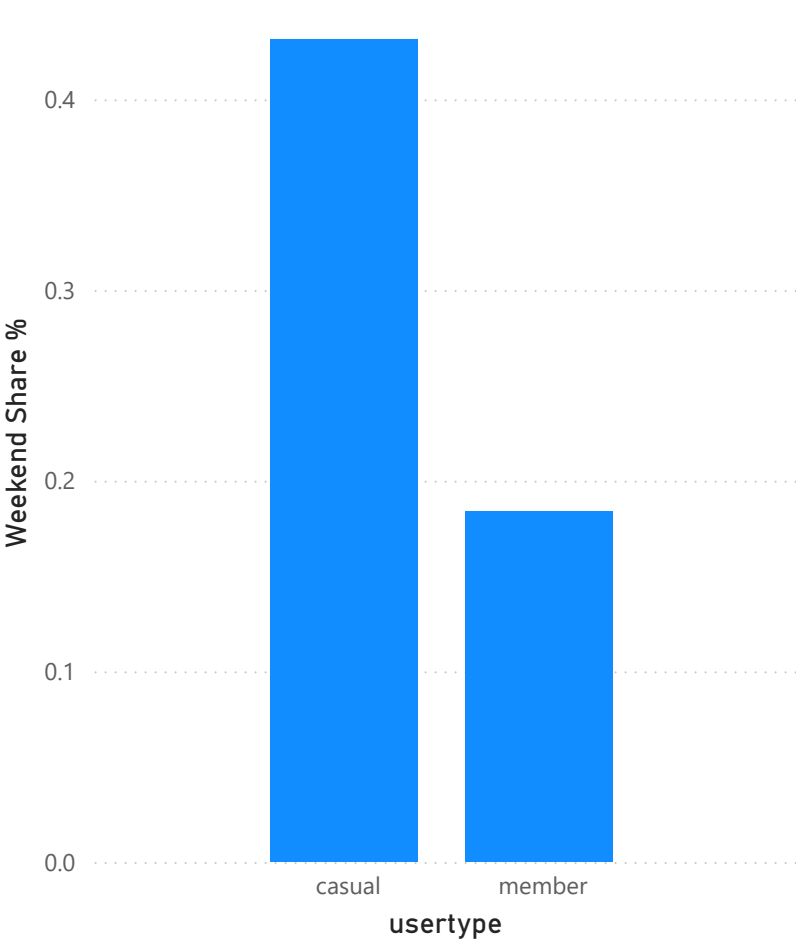

Behavioral Insights

- Casual riders take significantly longer rides than members.
- Members show strong commuting patterns with morning and evening peaks.
- Casual riders ride more frequently on weekends.
- Ride duration peaks during summer months.

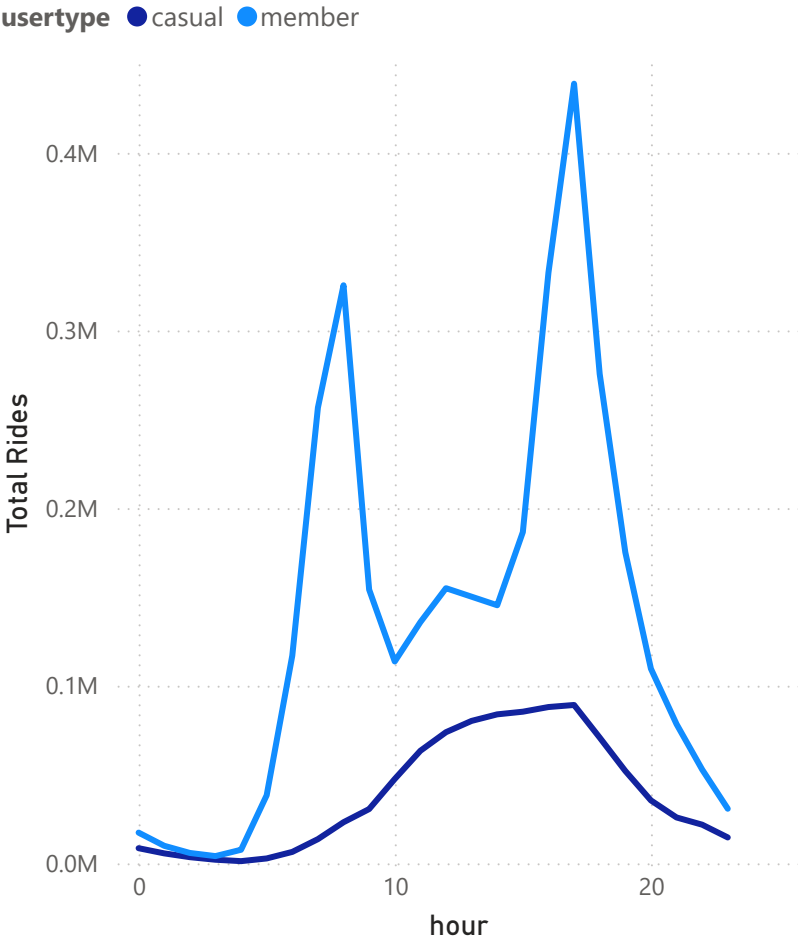

Conversion Opportunities

Marketing Recommendations for Converting Casual Riders into Annual Members

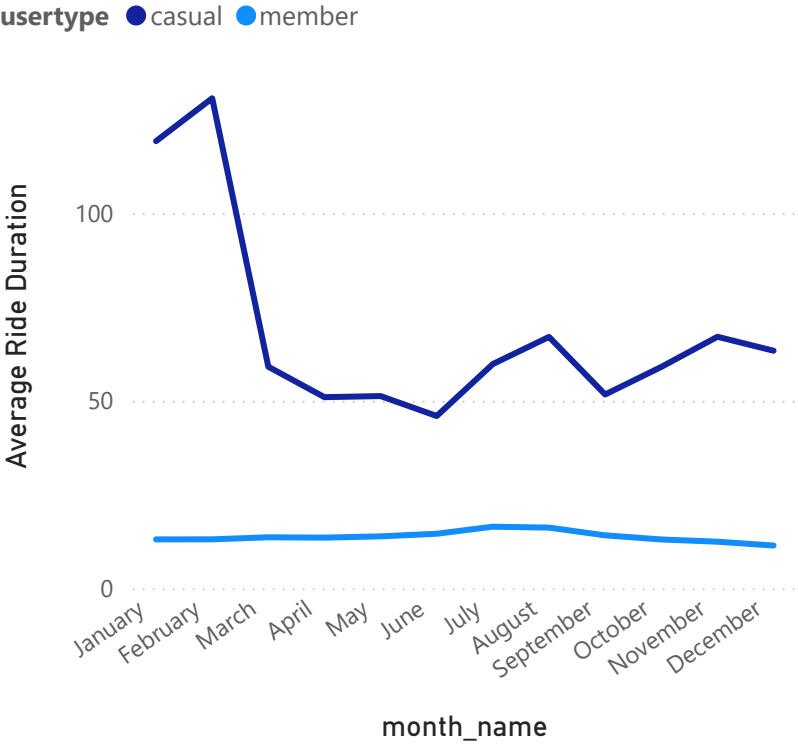

Weekend Usage Share by Rider Type

Peak Riding Hours for Casual Riders

Seasonal Engagement Trends

Strategic Recommendations for Membership Growth

- 1.Launch Weekend Membership Campaigns
Target casual riders with weekend-focused membership campaigns.
- 2.Promote During Peak Riding Hours
Deliver in-app offers and email campaigns during afternoon and evening riding peaks.
- 3.Increase Summer Marketing spend
Concentrate acquisition efforts during high-engagement summer months when casual rider activity is highest.
- 4.Emphasize Cost Saving
Highlight how frequent casual riders can reduce long-term riding costs through membership plans.